SAM NEWHOUSE, REPORTER

The sheer volume of horror in the Pennsylvania attorney general's grand jury report on sex abuse in six Pennsylvania dioceses (Philadelphia's was previously investigated) defies all description and beggars belief for the depths of perversion that men of the cloth were capable of engaging in. While the revelations in the graphic and disturbing report reverberate internationally, we talk to a trauma recovery expert about how Catholics, the community and the clergy itself can possibly heal. Answer: It won't be easy, and it might not even be possible. Read more on page 6 and metrophilly.us.

WELCOME TO
METRO.USBUDDHIST MONK RESIGNS
FOLLOWING SEX SCANDAL

One of China's highest-ranking Buddhist monks quit as the head of the country's Buddhist association on Wednesday after facing a government investigation over accusations of sexual misconduct. The abbot of Longquan Temple on the outskirts of Beijing, who is also a member of the Communist Party's top political advisory body, has denied accusations of harassing and demanding sexual favors from several nuns. The Buddhist Association of China said in a statement on its website that it had accepted Master Xuecheng's offer to resign from the chairmanship and other posts on Wednesday, without elaborating on the reasons. China's religious affairs administration launched an investigation following accusations leveled against the abbot in a document prepared by two former monks at the monastery. Xuecheng issued a denial on his Weibo microblog account, saying the allegations stemmed from "fabricated material" and "distorted facts." The case is one of the most prominent to have arisen since the #MeToo movement began to gain momentum in China.

MANAFORT: 'HUGE DUMPSTER OF HIDDEN MONEY'

Paul Manafort had "a huge dumpster of hidden money" abroad, a prosecutor said on Wednesday, urging a jury to convict U.S. President Donald Trump's former campaign chief on financial fraud charges based more on a paper trail of evidence than on the testimony of a former protegee. Special Assistant U.S. Attorney Greg Andres gave his closing statement in federal court in Alexandria, Virginia, where Manafort is on trial on tax and bank fraud charges, along with failing to disclose foreign bank accounts. The jury is expected to begin deliberating on a verdict on Thursday morning. The trial is the first to come out of special counsel Robert Mueller's investigation of Russian meddling in the 2016 presidential election. The charges involve tax and bank fraud, not possible collusion between Russia and Donald Trump's campaign for president. A Manafort conviction would undermine efforts by Trump and some Republican lawmakers to paint Mueller's Russia inquiry as a political witch hunt, while an acquittal would be a setback for the special counsel.

PROTEST AGAINST US IMMIGRATION AND CUSTOMS ENFORCEMENT IN NEW YORK

People gather to protest against U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement, demanding the release of Banny Doumbia, an Ivory Coast native and Detroit father who has been in the United States for nearly 30 years, in Manhattan on Wednesday. His family stated he was detained without explanation after a routine ICE check-in last week in front of the Ivory Coast consulate general in New York City.

UK HEAT HELPS UNCOVER
ARCHAEOLOGICAL SITES

Britain's hottest summer in decades has revealed cropmarks across the country showing the sites of Iron Age settlements, Roman farms and even Neolithic monuments dating back thousands of years, archaeologists said on Wednesday. Cropmarks — patterns of shading in crops and grass seen most clearly from the air — form faster in hot weather as the fields dry out, making this summer's heat wave ideal for discovering such sites. Archaeologists at the public body Historic England have been making the most of the hot weather to look for patterns revealing the ancient sites buried below, from Yorkshire in the north down to Cornwall in the southwest. "We've discovered hundreds of new sites this year spanning about 6,000 years of England's history," said Damian Grady, aerial reconnaissance manager at Historic England. "Each new site is interesting in itself, but the fact we're finding so many sites over such a large area is filling in a lot of gaps in knowledge about how people lived and farmed and managed the landscape in the past," he said.

EX-CIA CHIEF'S SECURITY
CLEARANCE REVOKED

President Donald Trump moved to penalize a sharp critic on Wednesday, revoking the security clearance of Obama-era CIA Director John Brennan for making what he called "a series of unfounded and outrageous allegations" about his administration. The Republican president, in a statement read to reporters by White House spokeswoman Sarah Sanders, also announced he was evaluating whether other former high-ranking officials, all of whom have criticized him, should have their security clearances withdrawn as well. The decision came a day after Brennan, who headed the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency under Democratic President Barack Obama, leveled a blistering attack against Trump for the president's tweeted criticism of former White House aide Omarosa Manigault Newman, who wrote a book critical of Trump. "It's astounding how often you fail to live up to minimum standards of decency, civility, & probity. Seems like you will never understand what it means to be president, nor what it takes to be a good, decent, & honest person. So disheartening, so dangerous for our Nation," Brennan wrote.

Airbnb launches $10M initiative, aims to show how taxing guests could benefit

The home-sharing site launched its “A Fair Share” initiative on Wednesday.

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT
kristin.toussaint@metro.us

Airbnb in New York is somewhat in flux. While the home-sharing site is facing potential restrictions from New York City lawmakers, it could see a bill in its favor from state officials, and the company has launched a $10 million initiative to bring attention to the latter.

A bill in the New York State legislature would allow Airbnb to collect taxes from its guests, similar to how hotel rooms operate. This could mean $100 million annually in tax revenue for the state, per Airbnb.

To emphasize this benefit, Airbnb in New York launched its “A Fair Share” initiative on Wednesday. Through the $10 million effort, in which the home-sharing site will support seven community-based service organizations across the state, Airbnb hopes to show the impact of such tax revenue.

“We’ve spoken time and time again of the tax revenue and economic opportunity New York is leaving on the table without a pathway to statewide tax collection and remittance for home-sharing platforms,” said Margaret

Richardson, director of global policy at Airbnb. “This initiative is proof positive of what harnessing the growth of home sharing can look like.”

But they could get a bigger boost from the state, the company argues.

Airbnb in New York has nearly 59,000 hosts who have housed 2.9 million guests across the state. The stimulus those organizations are getting from Airbnb could be a sign, the company says, of plenty more benefits to come if that tax revenue bill becomes law.

Healing hard to imagine after 1,000-victim Catholic sex abuse scandal revealed

Revelations of an estimated 1,000-plus victims and 300 child predators hidden by Pennsylvania clergy officials shocked the nation.

sam.newhouse@metro.us

The recent grand jury report issued by Pennsylvania Attorney General Josh Shapiro on Catholic sex abuse at six dioceses around the state, with only partial redactions, exposed the public to pervasive Catholic sex abuse at six dioceses around the state, universally concealed by church officials.

While Catholic sex abuse scandals have been reported before, the revelation that hundreds more predators than previously known were actively sexually abusing children has shaken many to their core.

"These are the people you would think are going to be most safe, because they're connected to a faith-based dynamic and God," said Gerry Vassar, CEO of Lakeside International, which trains professionals to help those who have experienced trauma. "Now we find in even that, children have been taken and abused."

In the day since the grand jury's report, Pope Francis has remained silent on the reports. And as the report reverberated nationwide, Catholic Church officials said they were "profoundly saddened each time we hear about the harm caused as a result of abuse, at the hands of a clergyman of any rank," but pointed out that the report, spanning decades of abuse that was documented in confidential church records reviewed by the Pennsylvania grand jury, all detailed past incidents.

The six Pennsylvania Dioceses where predators allegedly molested children and were protected by church higher-ups have issued apologies and pledges to work for victims.

But for those who have survived a life-impacting traumatic event, Vassar said, therapy and social help are necessary to recovery because some changes are permanent.

"It imprints on the brain in such a way, this affects a person's whole life, emotionally and physically," Vassar said of experiences like childhood sexual abuse. "Some of this trauma is dysregulating. It means I have a very hard time living in my cortex, where I'm cognitive; I live mainly in the fear parts of the brain, and the fear parts of the brain are highly anxious."

That brain change can leave people living in states of hypervigilance or disassociation; experiencing things like insomnia, fatigue and panic, or completely checking out of day-to-day life. For those whose complaints were ignored by authorities, the pain can be even worse, he said.

Vassar said trauma victims will need an approach including giving them a voice to share their experiences, looking at the incident itself to realize they were not at fault, learning self-care and emotional self-regulation, and therapy. But the church itself will have to aid in the healing process through transparency, he said.

"We're talking about people's faith and people's love of God and something they've relied on," Vassar said. "All of that's been damaged, unless we can come clean."

Doctors Urge Knee Pain Sufferers

“Don’t Get ANY Surgery Until You See This...”

After Years Of Intense Study, NYC Medical Clinic Finally Reveals It’s Best “Treatment Formula” For Helping Knee Arthritis Sufferers... Especially When So Many Other Treatments Have Failed

NEW YORK CITY - If you are even remotely interested in discovering how the latest scientific discoveries can possibly help your knee pain... then this is going to be the most exciting information you ever read.

Here is why: Knee pain can not only be brutal... it’s complex. In other words, it’s not a simple, easy fix.

But I’m sure you already know that. Or you wouldn’t be reading this.

That’s the bad news.

Now for some good news...

Over the years, NYC Pain MD has treated countless knee pain sufferers. And in that time have been able to constantly improve.

And we have come up with a treatment formula that we have found works best and helps the most patients.

This formula has reduced or even eliminated the pain in many. Some were scheduled for knee replacement surgery and felt good enough to cancel their surgery.

It’s amazing when patients who were once in excruciating pain... start feeling better. And start walking again. And playing golf. Or tennis. And finally getting their lives back.

Especially when they had gone to other doctors and tried so many other things.

So many had given up hope.

Sound familiar? If it does... check this out...

The Treatment Formula

While I can’t give you the entire treatment formula here (there is not enough space and WAY too complicated) I can give you the basics. And more important... I can tell you what it might be able to do for YOU.

The first and most important part of the formula is: PATIENT SELECTION.

This means, NYC Pain MD has a detailed screening process to tell who is most likely to be helped by their treatments... and who is not.

If you qualify, you have the opportunity to move forward and experience the worldclass treatments that NYC Pain MD offers.

If you do not, NYC Pain MD will tell you what they think your best options are and help you find the right doctor for you.

NYC Pain MD “Treatment Formula” A protocol of advanced medical treatments that has already helped thousands.

If you qualify, NYC Pain MD offers some of the most advanced medical treatments available today all using the most advanced imaging technology including:

- Viscosupplementation (gel injections)
- Platelet Rich Plasma (PRP)
- Stem Cell Therapy (Lipogems)
- Genicular Knee Block
- And more.

Once again, there is not enough space to go into detail about all these procedures... but here are some things you MUST KNOW...

Viscosupplementation is where a doctor introduces a gel-like medicine directly into the joint space. This helps to lubricate the joints often relieving some, most or even all of your pain. Results can last for 6 months to several years.

Many have had these treatments without good results. However, NYC Pain MD feels this is because doctors often do these “gel injections” without advanced imaging to guide them. Research shows they will often miss the joint. If the joint is missed... it is impossible for the treatment to work.

NYC Pain MD has spared no expense and used advanced imaging to guide the injections assuring the medicine gets into the joint. We frequently get results when this treatment was a failure done elsewhere.

The second thing you must know is... our treatment plans are custom made for every patient. And we have all these treatments offered in the same place. Many times you will get the best results from multiple treatments. At NYC Pain MD your doctors will all be there and will all know each other and you and your case. They work together and give you the best treatments and care without you having to go anywhere else.

The ability to select the right patients and then have the potential to give them any or all of these treatments... with all the necessary medical technology... under one roof... has allowed NYC Pain MD to get better results than they thought possible.

Here’s What You Should Do Next

If you suffer with knee pain... and any of this made sense to you... NYC Pain MD would like to offer you a No-cost screening. That screening is the first step in our “Treatment Formula.”

You will get to see a doctor and ask any questions you have. Your doctor will take the first steps to see if you qualify for treatments and give you recommendations.

The best thing is... you will finally get direction. You will know what’s going on and what is your best course of action... step-by-step. The treatments will be explained in detail and you will breathe a big sigh of relief finally knowing what’s going on and what can or cannot be done.

There is so much we want to say to help you... but I’m out of space. Give us a call at 877-296-6310 and take the first step. That step is free without obligation.

At 120 Broadway, the old Equitable Building becomes new again

The architecture firm behind the historic Grand Central renovation is restoring 120 Broadway to its past glory with modern amenities.

nikki.mascali@metro.us

When it opened in 1915, the Equitable Building at 120 Broadway changed the real estate landscape of New York City — and the country.

Bordered by Broadway and Cedar, Nassau and Pine streets, 120 Broadway occupies an entire city block and was, until 1930, the largest office building in the world.

The 40-story Equitable Building was so sizable it cast a seven-acre shadow on surrounding buildings and streets, causing city officials to create zoning regulations that limited the height of new constructions and required certain structural elements to ensure sunlight would hit the streets. The measure subsequently became a zoning blueprint adopted across the country.

"It's one of the most known buildings in Manhattan simply because it precipitated all the zoning regulations in New York City because it went straight up, there were no setbacks," said Carlos Cardoso, a partner at architectural firm Beyer Blinder Belle.

Not only is BBB located on the 20th floor of 120 Broadway, the firm behind the historic renovation of Grand Central Terminal has been tasked by building owner Silverstein Properties to bring back the architectural glory of the landmarked building and add a few modern amenities.

120 Broadway: A facelift 103 years in the making
Over the past century, the lobby of 120 Broadway has changed from a bright, welcoming galleria to something akin to a dark cavern where security points block access at its four entry points.

"We wanted to bring back the fabric of the building and how the lobby was originally used," Cardoso said. "We're bringing that back — all the ornate metal, the glass, the light. It's totally going to transform one's BBB is also bringing back historic replications of 120 Broadway's original chandeliers with new LED technology to further make the lobby “more welcoming and calming,” Cardoso said, adding that new elevators akin to those from the old days are also in the works.

The Equitable Building's facelift doesn't just include restoring its past grandeur. Additional amenities will include restaurants and retail, bike storage with showers and locker rooms, and a tenant-exclusive rooftop terrace with a lounge and café.

The rooftop space harks back to 120 Broadway's exclusive Bankers Club, which occupied the top three floors and closed in 1979 after decades of serving Wall Street executives, politicians and notable dignitaries like Charles de Gaulle, Winston Churchill and Queen Elizabeth II.

“It's such a large footprint to create an outdoor amenity, which is obviously something that every office building's tenants want,” Cardoso said. “It was a natural path that we followed to make that space viable — and there's not many buildings in New York that have this size roof footprint.”

Work on 120 Broadway, which is where Metro's offices are located, is underway and expected to be complete by the end of May.

Adjacent to the rooftop terrace at 120 Broadway, a cafe for tenants will transform into a lounge for post-work festivities. SILVERSTEIN PROPERTIES

NYC Ferry welcomes Soundview route

Residents of the Bronx and Upper East Side have a new travel option with the launch of the NYC Ferry Soundview route. TWITTER / NYCERRY

Passengers can now get from Clason Point in the Bronx to Wall Street in less than an hour.

nikki.mascali@metro.us

Bronx residents have sailed into a new commute to Manhattan and beyond as the NYC Ferry launched its much-anticipated Soundview route Wednesday morning.

The new route offers service from Soundview/Clason Point to East 90th Street, East 34th Street and Pier 11/Wall Street — in about 45 minutes.

"We are adding another stop on our route to becoming the fairest big city in America," Mayor Bill de Blasio said. "The new Soundview ferry will cut commute times in half for thousands of Bronxites. Our all-of-the-above approach to transit gives New Yorkers reliable options to get where they need to go."

At 34th Street and Wall Street/Pier 11, Soundview passengers are able to transfer for free to the East River, Rockaway, Astoria and South Brooklyn NYC Ferry routes.

"This long-awaited, much-anticipated ferry service has the potential to dramatically improve the commutes not only of Soundview residents, but of Bronxites in every community," Bronx Borough President Ruben Diaz Jr. said.

To further serve Bronx residents who can take advantage of the NYC Ferry, the Bx27 bus now includes a stop at Clason Point Park. The bus connects customers in the Shorehaven, Clason Point and Soundview neighborhoods to the Morrison Avenue-Soundview 6 subway station. Prior to this extension, the Bx27 terminated on Soundview Avenue about 1,000 feet northwest of the ferry landing.

Not only is the Soundview launch beneficial to Bronx residents, it also gives a new travel option to those who live on the Upper East Side with the East 90th Street stop.

"The new Soundview Route will give New Yorkers who live and work on the East side a fast, affordable and convenient way to get around the city," said state Sen. Brad Hoylman. "Ferries are an innovative solution to our city's transit crisis, and thanks to work of NYDEC and NYC Ferry, more New Yorkers will have the opportunity to step off our crowded trains and buses and breathe in the fresh harbor air."

Since its launch in May 2017, the NYC Ferry has served more than 5 million riders, and the addition of the Soundview route is expected to add about 400,000 more each year.

Ex-NYC union head convicted of taking bribe for investing in hedge fund

The former head of New York City's correction officers' union was found guilty on Wednesday of accepting a bribe to steer union money to now-defunct hedge fund Platinum Partners for investing.

Norman Seabrook, who once led the Correction Officers' Benevolent Association, was convicted by a Manhattan federal jury of one count of fraud after his second trial on the charges. An earlier trial ended with a hung jury in November.

The jury has so far failed to reach a verdict on a related conspiracy charge. U.S. District Judge Alvin Hellerstein ordered them to continue deliberating.

Paul Shechtman, a lawyer for Seabrook, had no immediate comment. Federal prosecutors had accused Seabrook of steering $20 million of union funds into Platinum in exchange for a $60,000 bribe from the fund. Prosecutors said the payment had been arranged by Platinum co-founder Murray Huberfeld and delivered to Seabrook in the form of cash stuffed into a Ferragamo bag by real estate developer Jona Rechnitz.

Rechnitz, whose role as a fundraiser for New York City Mayor Bill de Blasio drew public attention to the case, pleaded guilty and testified against Seabrook.

Huberfeld had gone to trial alongside Seabrook last year but pleaded guilty to one count of conspiracy to commit wire fraud before Seabrook's second trial. He did not testify against Seabrook. REUTERS

LET'S COOL DOWN ON THE GROUP TEXTS

OK, so Eric's surprise birthday party is next Wednesday and it's time to let the rest of your friends know if you're coming and what you will be bringing to Samantha's apartment. You've claimed the "chips and dip" portion of the Google Doc that has been circling back and forth among the group, but there are a few people who refuse to check it. Glenn fires off a quick group text to all of the people invited, pressuring people to speak up. There are a solid 20 phone numbers you don't recognize. Most of them keep silent, but the 15 people you do know chime in to the conversation. The problem is, people get sidetracked. Now every time you open your phone to give yourself that respite dopamine rush you need to break up the work-day, you find 78 texts waiting for you. You scroll through to find no hard data. Just a bunch of emojis and inside jokes that you missed out on 35 texts ago. Oh, look, James just sent a video of a hippopotamus eating a watermelon in one bite. Is he bringing watermelon to the party? Is he bringing Hungry Hungry Hippos? What are we even talking about anymore? The point is, this is all supposed to be simple. We all know what is going on for this party. Do we really need the group chat anymore?

Aries Get involved in activities that require intelligence, motivation and stamina. A change regarding a partnership should be handled delicately. If someone overreacts, back away.

Taurus Change can be good, as long as it's carefully considered. Learn from the experts and handle each situation you face with diplomacy. Look at the facts before you react.

Gemini Trust in your feelings, not in what someone wants you to believe. Self-improvement will lift your spirits and encourage you to bring about positive change at home and in relationships.

Cancer Make a change for the right reason. You may feel emotional about something that happens, but acting too quickly will cause a feud instead of resolving the situation.

Leo Emotional situations will mount if you or someone else makes a last-minute change that disrupts plans. Keep the peace to accomplish more. Choose kindness over criticism.

Virgo Take a fresh look at an old idea. A slight change will make the difference between stagnation and progress. Older and younger people will offer innovative solutions.

Libra You have plenty to offer, but don't let anyone take advantage of your generosity. Keeping the peace is admirable, but you must know when to say no. Take better care of yourself.

Scorpio Emotions will be rumbling around in your head. Don't share with insensitive people who can't fully understand where you are coming from or how important something is to you.

Sagittarius Count your money, tuck your possessions away somewhere safe and help only those who are truly in need. Focus on personal gains and spending time with a loved one.

Capricorn Make a difference by bringing about changes at home or work that will encourage others to pitch in and help. Incentives and praise will improve morale.

Aquarius Past problems will surface if you get into an emotional discussion with someone who doesn't remember things the same way you do. Silence is golden, and actions speak louder than words.

Pisces Gains can be made if you use your skills to help yourself and the people counting on you. Share your thoughts, not your cash.

Don't expect to see the WWE star show off her hand-to-hand combat skills in the new action flick. MURRAY CLOSE/STXFILMS

Ronda Rousey learned a lot from Mark Wahlberg on "Mile 22." GETTY IMAGES

Ronda Rousey on the evolution of her acting, what she learned from Mark Wahlberg

The WWE superstar and former UFC champ opens up about her experience working on the new action flick "Mile 22."

matthew.juul@metro.us

As a WWE superstar and UFC Hall of Fame inductee, Ronda Rousey is used to tossing people around in the ring. Even in blockbusters like "Furious 7," "The Expendables 3" and the "Entourage" movie, Rousey's past big-screen roles have mostly featured her kicking butts and taking names. As you can imagine, the 31-year-old athlete-turned-actress is eager to try new things in the world of Hollywood, which is why she was so excited to work on "Mile 22."

Directed by Peter Berg, the movie revolves around a secret U.S. tactical team that's been tasked with transporting a foreign asset out of Southeast Asia in order to obtain information vital to national security. While "Mile 22" still falls under the action genre, surprisingly, Rousey doesn't show off her hand-to-hand combat skills in the flick. Instead, those duties are left to her castmates Mark Wahlberg, "The Walking Dead" star Lauren Cohan, plus martial arts wiz and "The Raid" actor Iko Uwais.

Ahead of the film's release this weekend, we caught up with Rousey to chat about working with Wahlberg on "Mile 22," the evolution of her acting and more.

We surprisingly don't get to see any armbars or judo tosses from you in "Mile 22." Was it nice to showcase other aspects of your acting arsenal? I love being able to showcase my martial arts in any way, but that's also not all that I am capable of. I think that Pete definitely made the right call in this film. He said he wanted people to be surprised to even find out that it was me by the end of the film. He didn't want me doing anything like hand-to-hand fighting and [wanted me] purposefully outside of my comfort zone because he made it clear that he believes I am capable of so much more than just that. That belief was a huge responsibility. I set out to prove him right and I worked really, really hard on this film. I hope that it shows.

Since Berg and Wahlberg both train in boxing and are big fight fans, did they pick your brain at all about the fight game or try to start any light sparring sessions with you on set?

No, nobody tried to fight me on set. If anything, I was asking them. I was the student there. That's their arena and area of expertise, and I was the one absorbing all the information for them. Maybe they did learn something from me, I don't know. There wasn't much fighting for me to do in the film. I was mostly just trying to learn instead of teach.

You were pretty pumped to work with Wahlberg leading up to production. What kind of acting tips or tricks did you learn from him during this experience?

He's just such a great example of professionalism. He came every single day completely and totally prepared. It was impressive how many ... just pages and pages of dialogue he would have memorized, and be able to deliver them differently every time and still be able to improvise if Pete asked something completely different from him at the same time. I realized that I had no idea how amazing of an actor Mark Wahlberg is by the end of this film. He was a great example.

Now I'm just surrounded by the best in the business and the best teachers I could possibly have. I just think it's the perfect environment to improve as quickly as possible. I feel like I've just made so many improvements on this film. I feel like I've progressed so much more on this project than any other project I've been on before.

You've accomplished so much in your career already. What goals do you hope to reach in the world of Hollywood?

I just want to be able to show people that I can do much more than just fight. I also want to be able to contribute to stunts and choreography and that stuff as well because I am just so fascinated with it. I really feel like I have a lot to contribute, but also on the nonphysical side, I am so fascinated with it and have so much to learn. Any opportunity I'd be happy with, if anything was super physical, if anything was super drama or comedy or anything in between. I really love acting. It's something I really enjoy and I'm extremely passionate about it. I would do it for free. I'm here because I love it and I really enjoy myself. I really hope that it shows and people enjoy themselves watching me.

The fight scenes are pretty impressive in "Mile 22," especially Uwais'. Were you able to contribute to the choreography behind the scenes at all? Oh no, that's Iko's area of expertise. He is like the Olympic champion of fight choreography. His style is so entirely different from mine. I would really love to collaborate with him and maybe someday create a fight that's us against each other or us together as a team. I just think that the huge difference between how we fight is really fascinating. I think that any fight is kind of a heightened conversation. I think we would have some very interesting conversations together. That's one thing I hope people take away from this film. They come in expecting to see me and Iko to be fighting or fighting each other, and when they don't see it, I hope that people will be demanding it and want to see it and we'll get that chance some time in the future.

U.S.-Russian relations play a big part in this film, and the subject is obviously a hot topic in the real world at the moment as well. Do you feel like this is the right time for this kind of project to showcase that dynamic? That dynamic has been ongoing. It's nothing new. It's a very storied history. It's a very hot topic at the moment and very current, and I think that's part of what makes this film stand out so much from any other action or military film that we've seen in a very long time. I think it's entirely unique and it could be the beginning of a redefinition of the genre. I've never seen anything like this in action before. It has so much of everything that I feel like this is one of those movies that are so rewatchable that every single time that you watch it, you'll pick up on more details and more things. Living in an information era, this is so much information in such a small amount of time, I think this is something that's completely new in film. You can't digest it all at once. You enjoy it, of course, the first time just as much as you would the fourth time because I think you'll experience it differently every single time, where you're noticing other things that you never noticed before.

From international relations to the world of espionage and mass surveillance, the film covers many themes that are important today. Having worked on this project, does it make you worried at all about the world at large?

One thing that the movie does make me [think about] is surveillance in general, and how surveillance can be used for good and how it can be used for bad, and how it's something very dangerous that we need to handle delicately. "Mile 22" opens in theaters Aug. 17.

Why the world needs 'To All the Boys I've Loved Before' right now

Director Susan Johnson talks about her new Netflix film and the power of rom-coms.

GREGORY WAKEMAN
Gregory.Wakeman@metro.us

"To All the Boys I've Loved Before" director Susan Johnson has opened up about making a luscious and uplifting romantic comedy that she hopes will allow viewers to escape the disarray of the modern world.

Based on the adored 2014 young-adult romantic novel from Jenny Han, "To All the Boys I've Loved Before" revolves around 16-year-old Lara Jean Song Covey (Lana Condor), who over the years has written love letters to all of her five past crushes. However, they were meant only for her own eyes. So when her younger sister posts them to each boy, Lara's world is thrown into chaos as they approach her one by one, which provokes Lara to explore her feelings, future and the budding romance inside of her.

A heart-warming coming-of-age tale, "To All the Boys I've Loved Before" is immediately reminiscent of classics of the genre, but since it's led by Asian-American actor Lana Condor, it still feels very vital and progressive as well.

Ultimately, though Johnson insists she "just wanted to make a movie where people could escape for 90 minutes," especially as "the world is in such disarray." In fact, Johnson believes the current struggles of the world have provoked a rom-com renaissance.

"If you think about the history of romantic comedies, look at World War II and the 1980s and the early '90s, when rom-coms were in their heyday," she says. "Here we are 25 years later, and that is always playing in my head when I am reading scripts and trying to pick what projects to do. I just want to give people hope and joy for a few minutes."

"Not every story has to be culturally significant, or change the world. Sometimes it is just entertainment and that is what I loved about the project," Johnson adds. "I wanted people to watch the film and go, 'Oh, hey, it is OK to be friends with my family, to have a good life. It is OK to put yourself out there.' Hopefully, people will reexamine their relationships."

Johnson is aided in this quest by Condor, who excels as Lara. It was an easy casting decision for Johnson to make, as she waxed lyrical about how "bright" the 21-year-old actress is, while insisting that Condor still brought an integral "depth" to the character she "just wasn't seeing in other actors."

"Lara Jean has this innocence about her, but she also thinks that she has her s— together. She has this certain way of doing things all the time," says Johnson. "Lana has this innate beauty. She is just an interesting person. She has an interesting background, her history is interesting, her life has been interesting. So she could just bring all of that into the room."

"To All the Boys I've Loved Before" debuts Friday on Netflix.

What to know about this year's Burning Man festival

The legendary arts and communal-thinking fest returns to the Nevada desert later this month.

patrick.king@metro.us

Out in the Nevada desert, a small utopia has been created by people who wish to shed the social, cultural and financial constructs of our organized society. Oh yes, it's time for these people to make their pilgrimage to Black Rock City for Burning Man 2018, the long-running arts and communal-thinking festival. Located 100 miles outside of Reno, Burning Man started in 1986 as a way for people to explore artistic expression and radical self-reliance. It has become most famous for the way the "community" operates during the weeklong event, as people who choose to camp on the grounds will live by a bartering and gifting system for food and goods throughout the festival, relying on the generosity of your fellow festivalgoer. Here is what you need to know about this year's Burning Man festival.

When is Burning Man?
Burning Man will start on Aug. 26 and run until Sept. 3.

How do you get to Burning Man?
Since Black Rock City is a temporarily erected destination solely used for the event, finding its exact location can be a little tricky for some festivalgoers. The exact GPS coordinates for Burning Man 2018 in Black Rock City are 40°45'13.83 N, 119°16'37.20 W. But for those who don't read maps as well as others, what are the brass tacks for traveling to this festival?

A common way for many to travel to the event is to fly to Reno, Nevada and drive in. To do this, you can take Highway I-80 east for 28 miles. Take the Wadsworth/Pyramid Lake exit, No. 43. You can get gas here. Then, go north one mile to Wadsworth and turn left, staying on Highway 447. It's 78 miles to Gerlach, and then 8 miles north on state Route 34 to BRC. The other option is Highway I-80 east for 4 miles. Take the Pyramid

Way exit, No. 18, to Hwy 445. Turn left and go north 31 miles. At Pyramid Lake, turn right on Highway 446 and go east 12 miles to Nixon. You can get gas here. Turn left on Highway 447, traveling north, 54 miles to Gerlach, and then 8 miles north on state Route 34 to BRC. Just be warned that Highway 447 is a two-lane rural highway and the festival expects over 60,000 Burners each year driving in and out of the festival. It might be in your best interest to get there early to beat the traffic!

How do you prepare for Burning Man?

The key to surviving such a radical event like Burning Man is to really understand what comforts you will be giving up during your time at the festival. By realizing that things like a warm shower, a comfortable bathroom, a quick and easy meal, or just a supermarket that you can pop into when your everyday essentials have been drained will no longer be there, the better off you will be. Make sure to bring enough food and water to get you through the week, but also make peace with packing minimally and relying on others to help you get through your trip. Burning Man has also set up year-round events called "local burns" in different parts of the world to get you in the mindset of the festival.

How much are tickets to Burning Man?

While the ticket registration has officially closed for Burning Man 2018, there are other ways you can find tickets to this festival online through secondhand ticket sites like StubHub. Just be warned, they might cost you a pretty penny, as some tickets have reached over $1,300.

2018 FANTASY FOOTBALL DRAFT ADVICE: TARGET DALVIN COOK, ISAIAH CROWELL

BILL DUBIEL

Welcome back fantasy football fans! With the preseason underway, it's time to start getting ready to chase another championship. Don't forget to check out Rotoballer.com for all of the tools you need to get the edge on your league mates.

CAN'T IGNORE COOK'S SKY-HIGH CEILING

The big factor that will help Dalvin Cook take a step forward is going to be how much Cook improves in the passing game. He only saw 15 targets in his four games, but he hauled 11 of those in for 90 yards. Obviously, Cook was not the primary passing-down back last year (that was Jerick McKinnon's role), and so it's certainly not fair to write off any receiving production that he might add. It's a borderline guarantee that he will rack up 400 receiving yards in 2018, as the only real competition for snaps he has is Latavius Murray. Cook is the clear workhorse in that offense, and he'll be on the field for a majority of snaps in all situations. It's perfectly possible that they use Latavius Murray as the goal line back, but Cook will more than make up for any losses there with his dominance of passing-down snaps. Plain and simple, the opportunity is there for Cook if he stays healthy — McKinnon and Murray were BOTH top-15 fantasy running backs after Cook went down last year, and if he's on the field the fantasy production is absolutely going to come.

ROLL THE DICE ON CROWELL

Isaiah Crowell's situation is actually pretty similar to Dalvin Cook's in that his next big leap is predicated on him taking a step forward in the passing game. Whether it's Josh McCown, Teddy Bridgewater or Sam Darnold under center for the Jets, the offense isn't going to be considered "high-flying" by any means. The Jets will be focused on controlling the ball on offense, and that means plenty of action for the running backs. Bilal Powell will certainly still be a factor, but if Crowell can continue to prove his capability in the passing game-like he did with a 16-yard catch-and-run for a TD in the Jets preseason opener — then he should have no problem assuming the lion's share of the touches in that backfield. I don't believe he has an RB1 ceiling by any means, but at his current ADP (RB35, 85 overall) he should be a great value pick in the 7th or 8th round of your fantasy drafts regardless of what format you play in.

TOO MANY COOKS IN THE KITCHEN WITH KERRYON

I don't think it's too much to assume that Kerryon Johnson is the most talented back in the Detroit backfield. The Lions took him in the second round of this year's draft, and any skill player with that much draft capital attached to him is a near-lock to be a key part of future plans. However, I don't see Johnson assuming that key role in 2018. While they invested draft capital on Johnson, the Lions also signed early-down bruer LeGarrette Blount in the off-season and he certainly isn't on the team to ride the pine. They've also kept Theo Riddick locked into a roster spot, as he's been a key to their offense on passing downs in recent years. With Blount on the field for early downs and Riddick on the field for passing downs, where does the volume come from for Johnson? He'll definitely get the opportunity to show his stuff this season, but if that's 10-12 inconsistent touches a game, he's simply not worth the draft day investment. In Round 6 or 7, take a guy with higher upside like Marlon Mack, Robert Woods, Cooper Kupp, or the aforementioned Crowell.

DRAFT SLEEPERS OF THE WEEK

SAMAJE PERINE, RB, REDSKINS - With rookie stud Derrius Guice out for the season, touches in the Washington backfield are Perine's to lose. He should have no problem fending off Rob Kelley for early-down back duties.

JACK DOYLE, TE, COLTS - Don't let the addition of Eric Ebron fool you — Doyle is the guy with fantasy potential in Indy. Very quietly had an 80-catch season in 2017, should replicate that with Andrew Luck back under center.

MIKE WILLIAMS, WR, CHARGERS - The 2017

first-round pick had a lost season due to injury, but he has been the talk of training camp in 2018 and should win the starting job opposite Keenan Allen in an offense that should be able to support two fantasy-relevant wideouts.

IF THIS IS IT FOR WRIGHT, LAUD HIM

@JoePantorno

Approximately 1,200 miles from Citi Field, one of the most important stories of New York Mets fans' disappointing and pitiful season began this week: the rehabilitation stint of captain David Wright.

The 35-year-old took the field for the first time in two years — hobbled by debilitating neck, back and shoulder injuries — for the organization's class-A affiliate, the St. Lucie Mets, in an attempt to make it back to the majors ideally for the very end of the 2018 season.

It's an idea that seemed far-fetched to plenty of Mets fans seeing as Wright has played in just 75 regular-season games since the start of the 2015 season. Understandably, many believed his career was over when the 2018 season, like 2017, seemed like a lost cause after the team almost immediately put him on the 60-day disabled list at the start of spring training as he continued to recover from the litany of injuries that have stolen the second half of his career.

Yet here is David Wright, the face of a downtrodden, often belittled, poorly-run and owned franchise, trying one more time to get back to the team that he (for some reason) loves.

I say that he's trying one more time because he basically admitted to the New York Post that he'll call it quits should there be another setback.

It's a very real possibility that something could go wrong. We're talking about a man who has had surgeries to repair a herniated disk in his neck, a torn rotator cuff and spinal stenosis in the last three years.

David Wright's comeback took another step forward this week. GETTY IMAGES

Getting back on the field, even if it's in single-A, is an accomplishment that should be heralded already.

But there are always the pessimists, especially in a sour and frustrated fan base, who have rolled their eyes and scoffed at the idea of the captain coming back.

In reality, he should have the full support of this fan-base, a group of people Wright has literally put his well-being on the line for.

Wright came into the organization at a promising time in 2004. Within two years, he was an All-Star and the Mets were one win away from a World Series appearance. With a young core of himself and Jose Reyes, the Mets were expected to at least be relevant for the next decade.

But this is the Mets and things will always find a way to explode and come crashing down to earth (you can thank the ineptitude of the Wilpon family for that, but that's for another editorial).

Wright wouldn't make the playoffs until nine years later in a 2015 season that was limited to just 38 games before helping the team make a magical run to the National League pennant and hitting a memorable home run in Game 3 of the World Series, the Mets' first home game in the Fall Classic since 2000.

It was a fitting moment that the captain more than deserved because, during that drought nearly-decade-long drought, Wright represented a dysfunctional organization with class, bringing legitimacy to a franchise that didn't deserve any.

He became a hero to the masses in Queens, putting himself in the upper echelons of franchise lore as he became the Mets' all-time leader in hits, doubles, runs scored and RBI. He made seven All-Star appearances, provided a marketable and friendly face to keep a bad team relevant and remained loyal to a franchise that did little to build a winner around him for a majority of his prime.

What did the Mets do to deserve David Wright?

I don't know, but the least the organization and fans can do is get behind him 100 percent and be ready to show their appreciation should he make his return to the majors.
